

SOUTH CENTRAL DISTRICT

MISSOURI ASSOCIATION OF STUDENT COUNCILS

To Whom It May Concern;

Inspire Greatness, Serve Others, Be More, Lead. These words could not be truer. When asked why students should take a day out of the classroom to attend the South Central District Student Council Leadership Workshop, it is very easy for me to justify. The following activities are planned for the 2013 district workshop. Students will participate in a keynote session with Grant Baldwin-a national speaker and writer promoting students to have confidence and lead in the real world; networking opportunities with students in other schools; opportunities to present and attend student lead workshops working with ideas and solutions to challenges that your school may be facing; time to become rejuvenated through youth friendly activities (a dance, large group games and icebreakers, activities); and most importantly members that participate are recognized for the valuable work they do serving their community and making school a safer, more positive place to be.

In addition, attending district meeting is an honor council requirement. It signifies that your school values student leadership and is willing to support student leaders and their advisors as they strive to incorporate values such as citizenship, democracy, gratitude, service, education, and school spirit. Student Council is the amazing organization that can build leaders while promoting school pride and respect for administration. If you want students to attend school, learn, and achieve more a strong Student Council should be the first rung on your ladder to success. I highly recommend encouraging your students to attend the SC MASC district workshop. It is an experience that will inspire greatness!

Sincerely;

Rodger Bridgeman
